The Wellness Center promotes an integrative and holistic approach to support the health and wellbeing of the whole person: body-mind-spirit. Integrating health practices with Christian faith, we endeavor to support students’ development of lifestyle practices that contribute to individual health and wellbeing, including wise nutritional choices, restorative sleep, stress management, exercise, spiritual practices, and cultivating healthy interpersonal relationships and community. For a detailed list of services and office hours, please visit the Wellness Center website.

Counseling and medical services provided to students are confidential. The Wellness Center complies with Washington State Administrative Code and federal HIPAA privacy laws protecting confidentiality as the legal right of students seeking health services.

All traditional undergraduate students at the Kirkland campus who are enrolled for four or more credits during the semester are charged a wellness/health fee. This fee provides traditional students access to Wellness Center services, including counseling and medical care. Additional fees may be charged for lab work, immunizations, or certain products. Students in the College for Adult Professional Studies (CAPS), graduate programs, and certificate programs may use the Wellness Center services on a fee-for-service basis, payable at the time of the appointment. Students with needs beyond the scope of services of the Wellness Center will be assisted with referrals to off-campus providers. If a student is referred to services outside of Northwest University, all fee schedules are between the student and the service provider.

Appointments can be scheduled by contacting the Wellness Center at Ext. 5282. The Wellness Center is located in Greeley Center for Student Services, Building #5. For health concerns that require immediate attention and occur outside of the Wellness Center’s office hours, please refer to the Wellness Center web page for a list of local resources that provide 24-hour response.
